3:15 - 5:00 pm

St Andrew's Church

(82 Kent Street, near Parliament Hill)

Faith communities play a significant role in Canadian lives. The Christian tradition in particular plays both an important historic and contemporary role in Canadian society. The idea that faith is a private choice now sounds quaint. What is the role of faith communities, and churches in particular, in the public square today? What contribution are the churches making to the public dialogue in Canada? What do Canadian politicians expect of the churches?

Join us for a session of listening and learning, dialogue and debate on faith and the public square.
